Great Legal Marketing Coaching Member Dan Monahan says:

“I can't wait to get to the office every day to implement one of the many new ideas generated through Ben Glass's system.”

Whether you've been practicing 25 days or 25 years, if you're looking for a new approach to define the law practice you want instead of having your law practice define you, I wouldn't delay another minute in becoming part of Ben Glass's Great Legal Marketing system.

Not only does Ben Glass provide you with invaluable ideas about creating your ideal practice that has obviously worked for him and many others who have invested in this program, he also provides you with the continuing support through his monthly reports and his Mastermind and Coaching groups also available for you to join.

Plus, you'll get the wisdom of the many support vendors that Ben and countless others have developed to implement all the strategies. You avoid the time, money and mistakes by learning about the already prequalified experts like Web Master Tom Foster, book publishers like Word Association, and direct mail marketing experts like Newsletters Inc.

After more than 25 years of a relatively successful PI practice, I was continuing to face increasing competition and no clear direction of how to think outside the usual box of marketing ideas that everyone of my colleagues were already trying. Now a year later, instead of repeating the same refrain like every other attorney I know who complains about practicing law, I can't wait to get to the office every day to implement one of the many new ideas generated through Ben Glass's system. And it's paying off in new, better cases.

...What have I done so far based on Great Legal Marketing Toolkit

- Completed two newsletters and one postcard; copies of which I enclose
- Put newspaper ads offering Free Reports in 3 different publications...I am enclosing those ads for your review
- Completed two books that deal with Worker's Compensation and Auto Law...
- I have the 800 number
- I have spoken with Tom Foster about a website
- I have combed through all of your materials and I bought most of Dan Kennedy's books and two of Seth Godin's

But the lessons don't stop with just the purchase of Ben's Great Legal Marketing Toolkit. After buying the kit and attending his first seminar last year, I returned to yet another seminar with attorneys from all over the country. And while skeptical at first that this might be a repeat of last year's great meeting, I came away with even more new and exciting ways to market my practice.

Believe me when I say that I've tried numerous marketing programs over the years. While many have some good ideas, none come close to what Ben Glass has managed to put together. Rather than wait for your competition to discover these ideas (my biggest fear after first getting the Great Legal Marketing Toolkit) order it today and start putting these ideas to work for you tomorrow. And if you believe that this is just all marketing hype, I welcome you to call me directly at 610-363-3888

10 ways Ben has Under-promised and Over-delivered

I am an original Platinum Mastermind Group Member of Great Legal Marketing. Through the continued help of Ben we have achieved the following results: 1) first page placement on Google and several first listings for our key words. Before Ben we did not even have a website. 2) Completely changing our marketing campaigns to emphasize education and information-based marketing. 3) Publishing a “free” book and several others on the way to promote that campaign. 4) Record gross revenues and profits. 5) A mailing list of past clients, friends, and phone contacts to help grow our “herd”. 6) A steady stream of new ideas that I can pick and choose to adapt to my practice. 7) The ability to brainstorm new ideas and concepts with an intelligent group of like-minded individuals. 8) For the first time I feel I have control over my law practice. 9) Critique of my advertisements before I spend a lot of money. 10) Peer pressure to actually get the work done!

“Your Toolkit was the best present we could have given ourselves — and our firm.”

My husband and I purchased the Toolkit as a Christmas present to ourselves (we run a small PI firm in rural PA). While we haven't yet made it thru all the materials, you have already inspired us to revamp our incredibly boring newsletter, to actively work on increasing our mailing list and to create and implement unique direct mainlining ideas. Admittedly, we are overwhelmed by most of what we want to do after reading your materials; we just keep reminding ourselves that we can do it all, we just have to take baby steps as we get started.

We've also begun a fantastic relationship with Newsletters Inc. (purchased pamphlets already; they are designing a "free auto review" postcard for us) and I've contacted Foster web design for help in establishing a web presence.

Your Toolkit was the best present we could have given ourselves — and our firm. Thank you for putting together such a common-sense "you can do this and here's how it's done" program.

Months later, Jim and Carrie drove down to Fairfax for Our Marketing Super Conference; this is the letter we got later, pointing out that what we do is not all about marketing, it's about life.

Hello Ben,

It was great to meet you at the Conference.

Since returning home, we've implemented many of the tactics you and others showed us: for example, Jim now works only 4 days per week (Fridays are now "Dad's Day" with the girls) and we no longer accept unscheduled phone calls (at first our staff thought we were crazy, but now everyone realizes that this actually streamlines everyone's time — no more playing phone tag, dodging calls, etc.)

In general, we valued every moment of the Conference and were mightily impressed with the caliber of the entire event — from the speakers, the accommodations, heck, even the quality of paper you used to print the materials — it was all top notch.

And getting to meet a rock star was just the icing on the cake. Thanks again for a superb Conference.

From North Carolina Personal Injury and Medical Malpractice Attorney Brent Adams:

“We Lawyers Are Also Egomaniacs.”

We lawyers are big copycats. It took lawyers twenty years after the Bates decision (which allowed lawyers to advertise) before lawyers began to advertise to any significant degree. Why? It is because we are all copycats. We copied the conduct of the established blue blood, silk-stockings lawyers who (even after the Bates decision) looked down their nose at lawyer advertisers. Ben Glass teaches us not to be copycats. He teaches us to look around to see what all the other lawyers are doing and to do the opposite. In order to stand out from the crowd, you must be different. Ben teaches us how to stand out and how to do things differently which leads to a better practice, more money, and a better lifestyle. For instance, he notes that you can go to any phone book in any city in our country and look in the phone book to see that lawyer’s ads are all the same. We could substitute the names of the law firms in the various ads and it would make no difference. None of the ads stand out. Ben teaches us how to draft telephone book advertising which stands out and differentiates us from the crowd. He teaches us that our ads do not have to be large to be effective.

We lawyers are also egomaniacs. We think that we have all the answers. Ben teaches us that is wrong. We should look to other industries and professions to see how they do it, what works for them, to see how they make money, and to see how they succeed. Ben teaches us to borrow ideas and methods from other businesses and apply those successful methods to our practice. He has shown us that there are many commonalities that we share with all other businesses and that we can adapt their methods in our practices to make us more successful. It may be true that our law school professors taught us to “think like lawyers.” However, that is not necessarily good. It is more important to “think.” Ben shows us that it is important to think about how other industries succeed and to open our minds to new ideas and methods, to expand our imaginations, and to embrace new methods of thinking. We can all go broke “thinking like a lawyer.”

We lawyers are also great procrastinators. Ben teaches us to “do it now.” Try new things, NOW. Even if it does not work, it is our failures that add to our body of knowledge and help us progress towards the ideas and methods that

WILL work. The advantage that we small firm lawyers have over the mega-sized law firms is that we can turn on a dime, abandon the things that do not work, and embrace new things. Ben teaches us to exploit that advantage to the fullest.

We lawyers have a terminal case of tunnel vision. We tend to focus on one area of practice, manner of doing things, habits, and customs and ignore the entire rest of the world. Ben removes the blinders from our eyes and allows us to see the world of law practice and life in general with a wide panoramic view. He teaches us to ask “why” and “why not.” Why can’t we do things differently? Why is the way we have done things for years the best way? Why can’t we change? Why can’t we be better? Why can’t we have greater income and work less hours?

We lawyers are miserable workaholics. We all tend to be “type A” personalities driven to achieve. The problem is that, somewhere around the second year of law school, we focus on achieving the wrong things. More cases, more briefs, more deadlines, more trials, more clients... and for what? Ben teaches us to step back, take a look at our lives, and examine what is important. He teaches us that we can have a successful practice without working sixteen hour days. Ben teaches us to focus on what is really important in life and, more importantly, how to find the time to achieve and enjoy those important things. Ben is a master at eliminating time-draining vampires. By doing so, we all have more time to live life the way it should be lived.

Ben’s materials provide a step-by-step guide to completely eliminating (or at least reducing) the five handicaps named above which we lawyers have and which prevent us from having a good quality lifestyle. While Ben will teach you about marketing, you will also learn how to make lifestyle changes which will greatly enhance your life and the lives of your family. Many who teach marketing to lawyers are not lawyers themselves. It is important that Ben is a lawyer. However, Ben is not just another lawyer. He is one of the premiere lawyers in his area of practice. Ben is on the cutting edge of new developments in the legal world and has taught lawyers throughout the country not only marketing techniques, but also new and creative innovations in the successful practice of law. It is important that we receive our marketing advice from an accomplished lawyer, not just an advertising man who does not know a tort from a doughnut.

I highly recommend Ben's toolkit, his seminars, and all of the materials which he generates so prolifically. Do not buy his materials, however, unless you are prepared to live a better life, have a more successful practice, and prudently manage more money than you ever imagined would come to you through your law practice.

“Ben Glass Is One Of A Kind.”

Ben Glass is one of a kind. Never before have I found a highly successful lawyer who is equally successful at marketing personal injury practices. Ben's combination of practical marketing know-how and in-depth legal experience is unique. Lawyers who enroll in his exclusive Mastermind Group gain access to a wealth of profitable and little-known, practice-building techniques. And those who attend Ben's Superconferences realize there's far more to marketing than running ads in the yellow pages. So whether you work with Ben in his Mastermind Group, attend one of his Superconferences, or take part in his workshops, you can be sure Ben's skills and insights will return your investment of time, money and energy several fold.

New York Personal Injury Attorney Gary Rosenberg Says That Applying Ben's Marketing Lessons Is Fun

If I took the sum total of everything I learned about marketing and law school before I met Ben Glass and wrapped it up with a pretty bow and applied it in one super, duper burst of energy, I would be staring at my telephone saying, "Ring phone, ring"; then Ben Glass introduced me to the science of legal marketing, after 23 years of practicing law, I thought my education complete.

Once upon a time, I began sending my clients a quarterly newsletter published by the ABA. Through ATLA, I discovered Newsletters Inc. and began using its newsletters instead. Then through Newsletters Inc., I discovered Ben Glass. One of your telephone interviewees (on CD) mentioned adding rejected clients to one's mailing list. Wow!

Ben has studied with the giants so I don't have to spend a fortune trying to sort the wheat from the chaff. Ben introduces me to marketing experts; I get to pick and choose from the best in the country.

I've looked at a lot of lawyer marketing materials, most written by non-lawyers who really have no idea of what pressures we all face running a law office, especially in this era of tort reform. Ben Glass really talks to everyone of us because he actually runs a profitable and growing personal injury practice. Having the opportunity to look over his shoulder to see how he markets his firm will be of immense value to any personal injury lawyer. You won't find this information in any of the standard "How to Build Your Personal Injury Practice" books.

Good morning. I opened my box this morning and just read “Ultimate Personal Injury Practice Building Toolkit.” I picked up some good pointers. I plan to rip the CDs to my iPod tonight so that I can listen when I am walking/running in the morning for exercise. Have a blessed day.

#2 — 2/10/06

I have listened to the “Start Here First/Getting Started” CD at least 5 times this week. On the fourth or fifth listen, a very clear, very focused marketing idea came to me. I plan to start working on it today.

#3 — 2/17/06

I read the quick start guide. I found it helpful in a crucial respect for me — creating a unique selling proposition. I also read the newsletter guide, since we use a “canned newsletter.” I think that you are correct. We use a canned newsletter because we have not developed a good time-management system from which we can create our own. But, we are working toward that end.

“At this seminar I found out that our marketing plan is all wrong. After 1½ days I have a list of 6 things to implement into my practice and marketing plan.”

*I have been practicing law in Southern Utah for 13 years. I have tried hundreds of personal injury, worker’s comp., and social security cases. I soon found out that competence doesn’t necessarily bring new clients in the door. If you want good cases, you need to be able to compete with the TV advertising firms. At this seminar I found out that our marketing plan is all wrong. After 1½ days I have a list of 6 things to implement into my practice and marketing plan. I was about to spend a lot of money on a radio campaign. I now realize that I need to spend resources on a website, newsletters, database, producing seminars, etc. The seminar was well worth what I paid. Saved me thousands in potentially bad marketing strategies. Presenters were the top of their field as were the participants. “Ben’s marketing ideas work because he never goes with the obvious, ‘do what everyone else is doing’ solution.”

Over the past few years, I have had the pleasure of getting to know Ben Glass through his participation on two listservs: Solosez, which addresses many issues faced by sole practitioners and small firms and Solomarketing, a Solosez offshoot focused on marketing for small firms and sole practitioners. Because I value his opinion and ideas so highly, I have asked for Ben’s advice and input “offlist” as well as on, and he has always been more than generous with sound, well thought out advice and encouragement.

Ben’s marketing ideas work because he never goes with the obvious, “do what everyone else is doing” solution. Instead, Ben uses unique approaches to stand out from the crowd of personal injury lawyers. His own marketing materials create a “win-win-win” situation: he attracts more qualified clients, potential clients are educated about important issues (such as how to evaluate attorney advertising or how to buy car insurance), and trial lawyers in general benefit from the dignified way he presents himself and, by extension, the profession.

In conclusion, I am honored to consider Ben one of my legal marketing mentors.

“If you want results, go with a pro like Ben Glass.”

I have personally spoken with Ben Glass about marketing of attorney services. He has always been helpful and willing to share his experience and excellent thoughts on how to market a law practice to get positive results.

In this age of the Internet there are many non-lawyers trying to tell lawyers how to market on the Internet, but they really do not care about results. Ben does care about results for you and results for your clients.

So, if you want results, go with a pro like Ben Glass. He knows from experience what works and what does not work.

Lawyer Advertising Becomes a Public Service

The most revolutionary thing about “Ben Glass”-style legal marketing is that it can turn lawyer advertising into a true public service. If we follow Ben’s lead and freely give the public the information it needs to protect itself, we can grow our practices and improve the image of our profession. Thank you Ben for showing us the way.

I have recently set up my own solo personal injury practice and I have been blessed to have Ben Glass serve as a mentor. He has demonstrated to me that with the crush of attorney advertisements out there, it is imperative to be able to stand out from the crowd. His lectures, newsletters and website make the potential client contact him because they want to learn more about their rights. I have patterned my practice after his and hope for his same success.

What Insurance Defense Lawyers are saying:

When I think of people who think outside of the box, Ben Glass is at the top of the list. His creativity and ingenuity are contagious, and he has an inspiring ability to help lawyers escape the traditional cookie-cutter approach to running and growing a law practice. Having worked with Ben recently in putting together a 2-day conference on Law Office Management, I know that he knows his stuff. He stays on top of (if not in front of) the cutting edge of law firm marketing. A direct and to the point entrepreneur, Ben is also warm and engaging, and eager to share new ideas that will make us all better lawyers with more successful practices.

Estate Planning Attorneys Speak Out:

*Ben Glass is a marketing genius. I have seen Ben's marketing magic for several years and he has knowledge most attorneys will never have. His advice and practice building tools are invaluable...I personally have hundreds of attorneys throughout the U.S. who have paid me thousands of dollars to help them with their marketing. Ben Glass may be the only attorney in the entire country I personally would pay for his advice. If you have a chance to work with Ben, don't walk...run to the mailbox to send your order in. In an Op Ed piece in the St. Petersburg Times on July 28, 2007, titled the "World is Watching," Tom Friedman observed that with the pervasiveness of the use of cell phone cameras connected to YouTube, MySpace and Facebook, each one of us may be an unintended subject of an embarrassing illustration of poor judgment.

If the random use of the new technologies presents new challenges, the directed and controlled use of these same technologies offers new opportunities. By coincidence, on June 29 and 30, I was an attendee and participant in the "Great Legal Marketing Super Conference 2007." Although, primarily focused on marketing for injury lawyers, all of the materials and technologies discussed and illustrated were equally adaptable for my use as a business, tax and estate planning lawyer. We already do education-based marketing through workshops, but they are not drawing well. We learned techniques for engaging prospects and obtaining a response that allows us to initiate the process of education them. New ways to contact and communicate with prospects were demonstrated. The concept of "the herd" was explained and illustrated.

Our office has had a website for 6-7 years, but it has not really been effective. The use of the Internet and website as an effective marketing tool was discussed and illustrated. The power of the Internet as an information communication tool was shown.

This workshop exceeded my expectations in both quality and practical application of information presented. The presenters went out of their way to be supportive and encouraging, both at the meeting and for future follow up.

Thank you, Ben Glass. You are ahead of the curve.

Your workshop provided what I really wanted and needed, a vision of the next generation of our firm's marketing strategy and style. I am very appreciative and very energized. A number of improvements have already been instituted. The way we think and how we conduct our business has been upgraded. We have had discussions and meetings designed to implement some of your ideas and philosophies.

I am confident that participating in the Mastermind Group will continue to expand my practice, which for us means continually upgrading: (1) Our clients and cases; (2) Our efficiency; (3) The quality of our service; (4) Our contributions to society; (5) Our modeling of "a way of being" for other lawyers; (6) The amount of money we make (includes our staff); and (7) the amount of fun we have.

Please pass on my gratitude and appreciation to all those who presented, assisted and participated in your workshop. Everyone made significant contributions to my experience. Have a wonderful July 4th celebration. The topic of the party we are hosting for our family, friends and employees is "What I appreciate about my country."

“Wow! Talk about results and firing us up!!”

As a result of changes in workers' compensation legislation in 2003 our firm was forced to reinvent ourselves. We added Social Security Disability and ERISA/disability litigation to the mix and began what turned out to be an unsuccessful campaign of traditional advertising.

Even in the face of those challenges, the idea of doing any more marketing was stomach churning...until Ben Glass introduced us to “Education-Based Marketing” in his Great Legal Marketing program.

With Ben's guidance and encouragement, our firm has embraced education-based marketing as an integral and, yes, even fun part of our practice!

Using traditional advertising methods we had 86 contacts in one year for Social Security cases. With Ben's education-based marketing techniques we had over 140 contacts in 2 weeks requesting our Social Security Disability report. Wow! Talk about results and firing us up!!

We are now “working on our practice” and, with Ben's assistance, we are growing a world-class Social Security and ERISA/LTD practice.
